ABSTRACT

A card access apparatus is provided that is adapted to be connected to plural types of cards, the apparatus

5 including plural connection points adapted for the respective types of cards, and plural signal buses that connect the connection points to a card control unit. When one type of card is connected to its corresponding connection point, at least one signal bus connected to a connection point adapted

10 for at least one other type of card is electrically isolated from its corresponding connection point.